Information

The San Pedro Riparian National Conservation Area (NCA) contains over 58,000 acres of public land along 40 miles of the upper San Pedro River. One of the most important riparian areas in the United States, the San Pedro River runs through the Chihuahuan Desert and the Sonoran Desert in southeastern Arizona. The river's stretch is home to 84 species of mammals, 14 species of fish, 41 species of reptiles and amphibians, and 100 species of breeding birds. It also provides invaluable habitat for 250 species of migrant and wintering birds and contains archaeological sites representing the remains of human occupation from 11,200 years ago. This area was recently designated a Sustainable Destination by National Geographic.

The national conservation area features the intact remains of the Spanish Presidio Santa Cruz de Terranante, a Spanish fortress marking the northern extension of New Spain into the New World. The Murray Springs Clovis Site is a significant archaeological resource that contains evidence of the earliest known people to inhabit North America. An interpretive trail leads visitors to the site. The area also features the ruins of the old mining town of Fairbank. The San Pedro House, a 1930's-era converted ranch house, serves as a bookstore and visitor center.

Participate in bird watching, a daytime or evening docent walk, picnicking, plant and wildlife viewing, pre-historic and historic site visiting, hunting, hiking, fishing, biking, horseback riding, guided hikes, interpretive site visitation, and weekend children's programs. Wheelchair-accessible restrooms are available at the San Pedro House, and other accessible trails are under construction.
